February 4, 2011

Operating Systems Upgrade

Primary Audience: AMS API Licensees

What: In an effort to accommodate the industry needs and provide the latest and most optimal technology, the USPS® is looking to upgrade its current operating systems in which the AMS API product is compiled. Before we can move forward with this effort and ensure there are no negative impacts, we need to know what operating systems are currently being used by the industry to support the AMS API product.

What you need to do: Please provide us with the type of operating systems along with the version number you are currently or anticipate using to support the AMS API product.

When: Please provide this information or any other platform suggestions to the USPS no later than COB February 15, 2011.

Impact: After reviewing all of the information provided, the USPS will upgrade to the lowest level operating system to ensure compatibility across all platforms. If your company does not respond by the date indicated above and the USPS operating systems are upgraded to a later version, your company may experience some difficulty using the AMS API libraries.
