Pilot Overview

Real Mail enables mailers to engage consumers through an integrated direct mail and digital marketing channel

○ Pilot

- Currently being piloted in Northern Virginia
- Service will expand to New York Metro Area in the fall of 2015.

Real Mail - Mailer Benefits

○ Generate multiple impressions from a single channel

Recipients view mail pieces both via Real Mail and physical delivery

“Different people in the house bringing in the mail...I can be sure that I didn’t miss anything.”

○ Make mail more interactive

Engage users and drive site traffic through digital content (e.g., link, video)

○ Reach your target whenever, wherever

Connect with customers via their mobile devices 24x7, even as they travel

Real Mail – Consumer Receiver

○ Consumers can interact with image of the mail piece

The image of the physical mail piece can be accompanied by digital interactive content

○ Access to the mailbox is available even when travelling

Subscribers can review the contents of the mailbox even when not at home

○ The entire household can have a quick view of mail

All members of a household can see what's arriving so they don't miss anything intended for them

Real Mail – Northern Virginia Pilot

- Real Mail Images delivered daily before 9 am ET
- ~4,400 active recipients
- ZIP Codes: 201, 220-223, 226-227
- Images are static except when active response testing is happening.
- Tested 3 scenarios

Mail piece only.

Mail piece with static scanned image.

Mail piece with interactive scanned image.

Real Mail – NYC Pilot: First Phase

- Recruiting in progress for recipients.
- ZIP Codes: 066, 069, 110-119
- Capability for supplemental, linked content will be available.
- Data will be provided to mailers describing open rates and click-through.
- Capabilities will be extended to Northern Virginia.

Participation in Metro NY Pilot

- Mailer willing to send at least one letter-sized test mailing in NYC November – February
- Test mailing to be sent to USPS provided list of Real Mail Users
- Mailing must be designed to drive traffic to a website so response rates can be tracked
- Mailers must allow USPS to use information on response rates in white papers and promotional materials. Business sensitive information will be obfuscated.
- Mailers must be willing to work closely with USPS throughout the process

“I am 96 years of age and having this info early in the day means a lot to me.”
